By Rebecca Austin McGinty

Createspace, United States, 2012. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 203 x 133 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.John Gilbreath's great granddaughter finds a handkerchief doll in an old trunk in the basement. Tucked in the doll was Gilbreath's note to his infant daughter as he left his family to join the 2nd Division, Co. D, 1st Confederate of Georgia of Catoosa and Walker Counties. Readers may share a wide range of personal emotions and experiences, from the pleasant kitchen odors of hot biscuits and white meat frying in the skillet, to the smell of death on the battlefield, through Gilbreath's journal and letters. The daily experiences of Gilbreath's family will take you from a peaceful farm life through gut-wrenching battles of the Civil War, and the mystery of what happened to John R.N. Gilbreath. In 1863, the Civil War entered its third year: Georgia and the Gilbreath family were in the thick of it. You will experience through Gilbreath's Journal, his thoughts and experiences. A quote from his Journal: October, 1863 The shamefulness and disgrace I felt in being captured, but a little relieved of knowing that I didn't...
