Fide the Will in Doctors Commons, indifference, may stand justified not less to his own conscience, than to the unmeriting herd. Junius. I am filled with grief and indignation, when I behold a wise and gallant people lost in a stupidity, which does not feel, because it will not look forward. The voice of one man will hardly be heard when the voice of truth and reason is neglected; but as far as mine extends, the authors of our ruin shall be marked out to the public; I will not tamely submit to be sacrificed, nor shall this country perish without warning. 1 Again. At a crisis like this, Sir, I shall not be Very solicitous about these idle forms of respect which men in office think due to their characters and station; neither will I descend to a language beneath the importance of the subject I write on. When the fate of Great Britain is thrown upon the hazard of a die, by a weak, distracted, worthless ministry, an honest man will always express all the indignation he feels. Junius wrote neither for profit nor for fame, he never deserted his principles, and was accounted a dangerous auxiliary to every party in the kingdom;d and addressing himself to Mr. Wilkes, he says, I have faithfully served the public, without the possibility of a personal advantage. And in a private letter to Mr. Woodfall-- In the a Mem. p. 41. b Junius, Vol. iii....
